

The Art of Collecting, Masterpieces from the Pinacothèque de Paris
14 September to 31 December 2013 | Singapore Pinacothèque de Paris

Pinacothèque de Paris, the largest private art museum in Paris, will open its first venue outside of Europe in Singapore. Set to fully open by the first quarter of 2015, the Singapore Pinacothèque de Paris will be located at the Fort Canning Centre, within Fort Canning Park.

The museum in Singapore will mirror that of France, a fine art museum known for its critically acclaimed exhibitions that celebrate transversality and the dialogue between different works of art. To provide visitors with a taste of what is to come when Singapore Pinacothèque de Paris officially opens, a pop-up exhibition will be held from 14 September to 31 December 2013.

Entitled "The Art of Collecting, Masterpieces from the Pinacothèque de Paris", the exhibition will span over 500 years of art history through prestigious works of art by 20 world-famous artists including Botticelli, Rembrandt, Van Dyck, Monet, Renoir, Modigliani, Picasso and Chu Teh Chun among others.

"Transversality" is a term that goes some way towards explaining how small, timeless, community of artists, from all periods, from all cultures and origins, are united by a similar way of thinking, of reflecting, and of behaving. By its encyclopedic approach, every museum tends to make us forget its main role: to ensure that the works stay alive. They all speak of beauty, have identical references, and the same historical narrative. But these works have to be placed together in order to set up a dialogue – beyond borders and periods – for they summon up what we all have in common.

– Marc Restellini (Director, Pinacothèque de Paris)
